PREFACE

MENU’s philosophy is simple. We want to make the world better, less complicated and a little bit nicer to wake up to. It’s a philosophy that we’ve been honing over the last five years, building our brand by constantly asking ourselves, “What matters most?”

Like my grandfather and father before me, I believe that design matters most when a product is useful, timeless and made from honest materials. At MENU, we’re obsessed with creating clever solutions for modern living and are proud to make beautiful objects for everyday use, be it a single dinner plate or a new dining table.

Our 2017 brand book highlights just some of the talented designers that we work with. Together, we find new functions, new materials and new production methods that honor MENU’s Scandinavian simplicity and timeless aesthetics.

MENU is a family-run company. We've been entrepreneurial since the get-go when our founders acquired a steel factory in rural Denmark and started to produce high-quality kitchen and silverware.

Now, our family has grown, as have our collections, to include new faces, designers and friends around the world. We're still a family-run company—now in the third generation—and the spirit of innovation with which we launched continues to be the driving force behind our designs.

We've always believed that good design matters when it's produced in a community where it makes a difference. Since MENU was established in 1978, we've invested in philanthropic causes and have worked with craftspeople around the world to preserve local skills while continuing to create the best in modern design wherever possible.

Take our Nepal Projects: we've matched our Scandinavian aesthetics with the skills of local craftspeople in Nepal, helping to build the local community through the production of unique design objects. The result is a range of beautiful items for the home, from handmade woolen teddy bears to elegant cashmere textiles.

Since MENU began, we've not only evolved with the times but stayed one step ahead of the curve. Our spirit of innovation and inherent understanding of people's daily needs is what has allowed us to develop into one of Scandinavia's leading design studios over the course of the last four decades. Now, we've built a strong universe that's ready to grow into the future. In 10 years time, we know that the world will be different.

We've always believed that good design matters when it's produced in a community where it makes a difference.

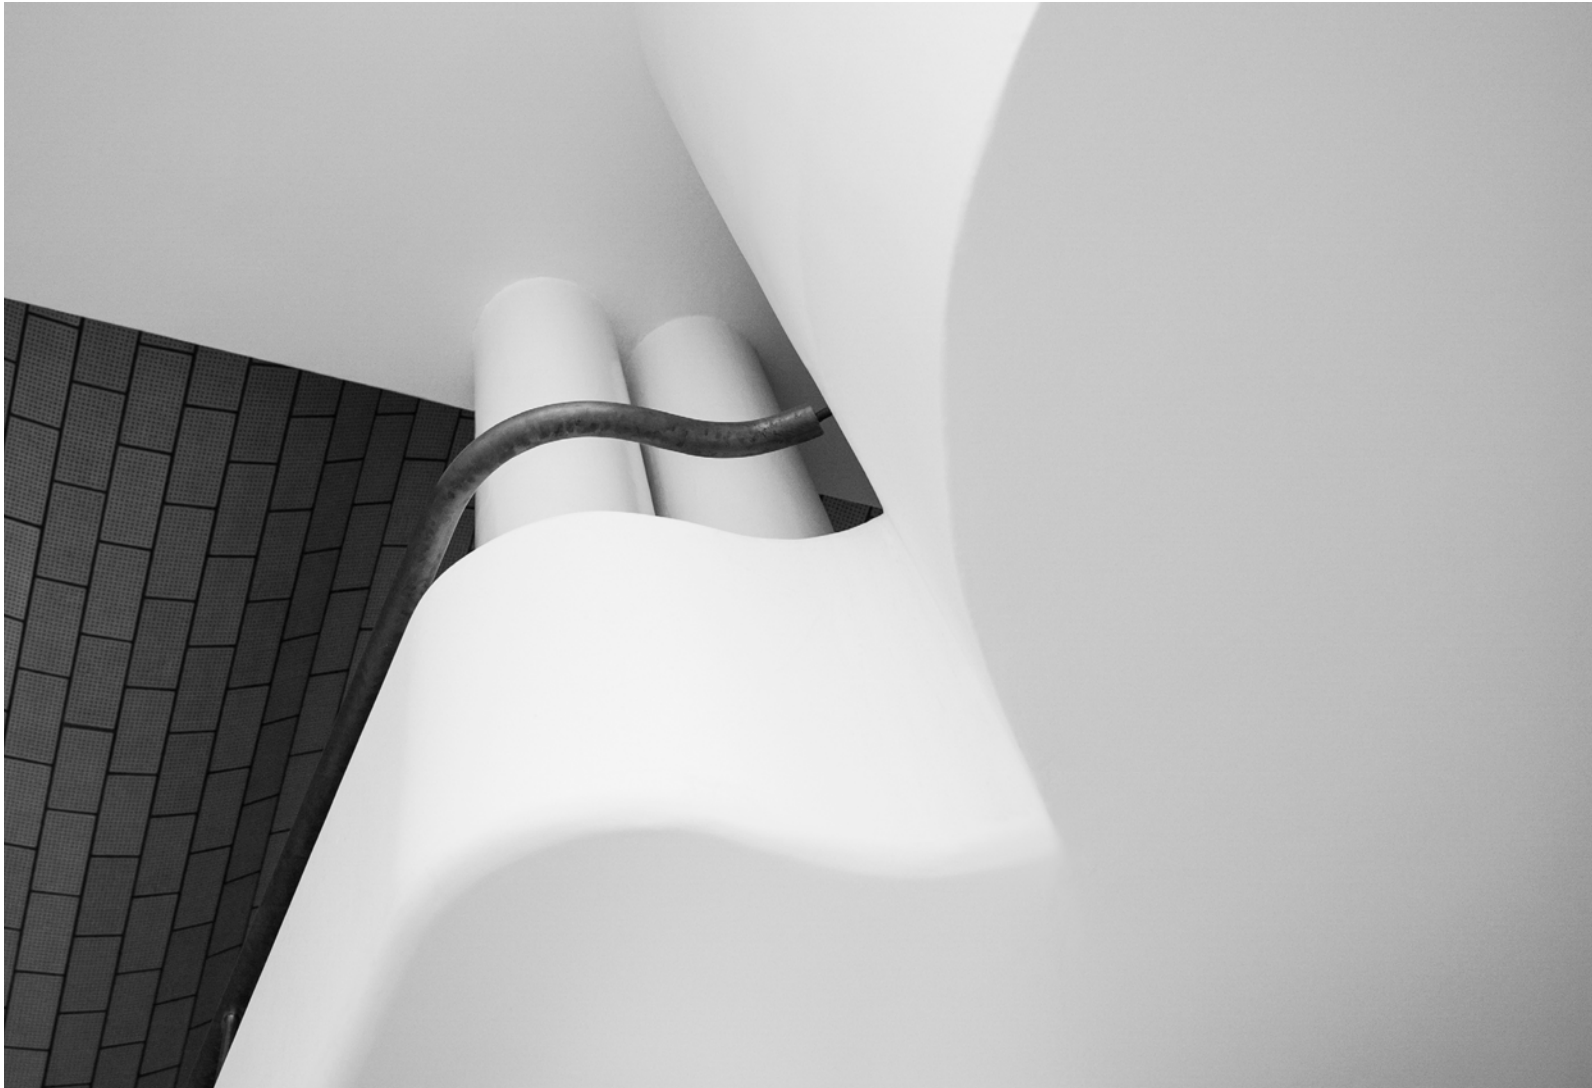

We're aware that our needs, expectations and the way we engage with our homes will change. That's why, at MENU, we keep an eye on the trends that we see emerging in the industry, but don't let them sway our own design philosophy of timelessness.

We know that furniture is something you invest in, that you hope to not have to replace. What we really want to help create in the future is a comfortable environment for our customers; objects and places that will still look good years from now, that people will continue to enjoy and find inspiration in. We want to make sure that the products we're making today will be the icons of tomorrow.

Within the pages of our Spring/Summer 2017 brand book, we'd like to invite you into the world of MENU. You'll find work by some of the most exciting and driven creative individuals from the worlds of architecture and design. From furniture and accessories to textiles and homeware, MENU is proud to present an inventory of beautiful objects for everyday use that what we've been dreaming up with industry leaders from around the globe.

We would also like to introduce you to just a few of those talented designers that we collaborate with. Søren Rose, a serial entrepreneur turned designer whose series of light sculptures for MENU was inspired by New York—his new home; Afteroom, a Taiwanese design duo based in Stockholm who produce the elegant, modern forms of our Afteroom furniture collection; and Jonas Bjerre-Poulsen, co-founder of Norm Architects, who has put his stamp on everything from teapots to tables at MENU.

Modernism Reimagined

Minimal design that's modern, understated, crafted and crisp.

Afteroom Bench
by Afteroom

At MENU, our approach to design is to create objects that last. We give our products a very simple aesthetic to make sure that whatever you take home today won't find itself replaced next year.

We want to make design matter for people. Your home is your universe and we encourage you to have strong opinions about what you bring into it. We want your home to be comfortable and endlessly inspiring; whether you choose one lamp or another should matter.

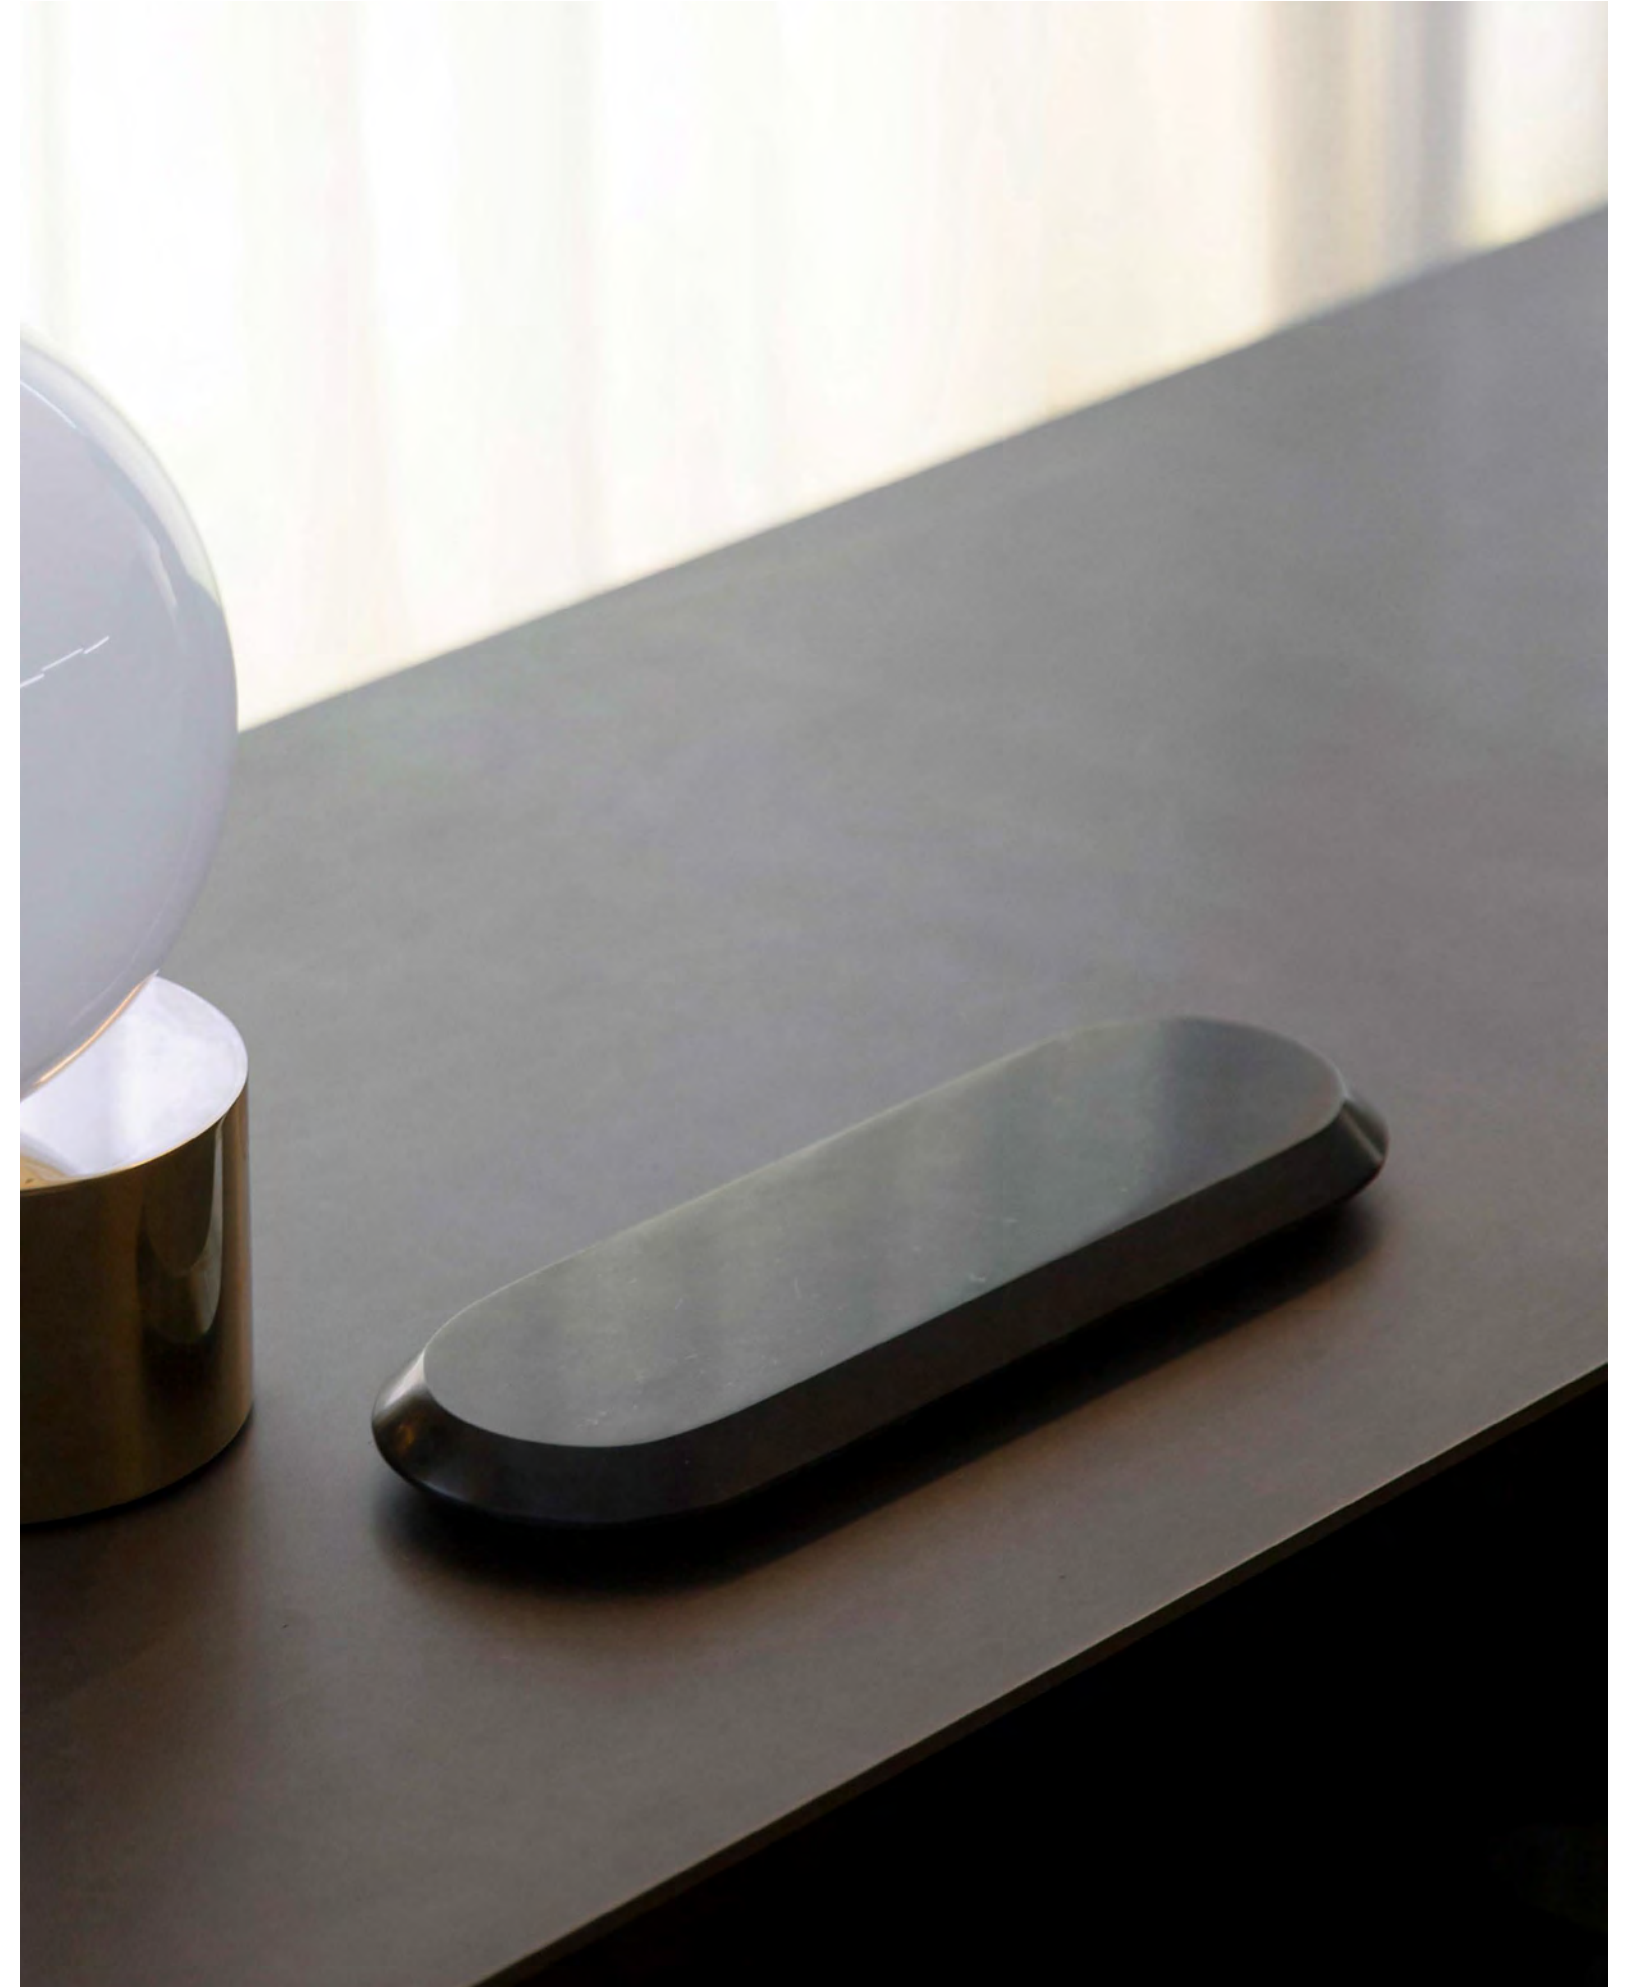

We love minimal design that's modern, understated, crafted and crisp. Think simplicity and humanized function, with clean lines and an emphasis on craftsmanship and practicality. We choose colors that are natural and that complement the materials that we use—materials that will weather trends and warm color palettes for longevity.

We work with innovative designers around the world to reimagine how everyday products in your home could make a big difference in your daily life. When adding to our collection, we've always maintained that a new product should either have a new function, a new material or a new production method in order to become a true MENU product.

Inspired by Denmark's modernist legacy, we give human and aesthetic appeal equal consideration during our design process. Our design department spends as much time focusing on clever solutions and functional details as they do using their imagination and creativity. And, what we do with our products, we do with all aspects of our brand: we try to strip things down to the essential details before adding a few elegant touches back in. It's what we like to think makes something inherently MENU.

PROFILE

Afteroom

In a way, we tried to create minimal sculptures that serve as furniture for everyday life.

Hung-Ming Chen

Based on principles that favor honesty and simplicity, Afterroom's designs explore the relationship between time and space.

The three-legged chair designed by Afterroom remains one of our most popular items.

When Taiwanese design duo Hung-Ming Chen and Chen-Yen Wei relocated to Stockholm to pursue studies at Konstfack—an academic hub for Swedish designers—they had no intention of staying in Scandinavia. A decade later, however, the couple now run furniture design studio Afterroom out of the very same building at Konstfack in which they studied, and live just a couple of blocks away.

Based on principles that favor honesty and simplicity, Afterroom's designs explore the relationship between time and space; 'afterroom' itself means the transformation that a space experiences over a long period of time.

The couple discuss ideas together before Hung-Ming sketches out designs and makes 3D models. Chen-Yen takes charge of creative direction, including the proportion and colors of objects. As a husband and wife duo, their creative process calls for honesty as the best policy—Chen-Yen isn't afraid to hurt Hung-Ming's feelings when giving feedback on his designs.

Admirers of the traces that the passing of time can leave on physical objects, Hung-Ming and Chen-Yen aim to create pieces that are not only to be enjoyed in the present but that can be passed down through generations. Consequently, Afterroom's designs carry a pure, paired-back aesthetic that arrives from the duo's sensory intuition and judgment.

Chen-Yen and Hung-Ming's love of tea inspired them to add tea-related items to their collection.

Their ethos is perfectly encapsulated by the Afterroom collection for MENU—a series comprising furniture, such as benches and tables, and accessories that include coat hangers and teddy bears. “We have so much in common in terms of vision and value,” Hung-Ming says of working so closely with MENU. We naturally have the same way of seeing things and share the same values.”

“The whole collection began with the first chair that we made for MENU—the three-legged chair. We’re big fans of Bauhaus and early Modernism icons, so we took a lot of ideologues and form language from those movements as our inspiration,” says Hung-Ming. “In a way, we tried to create minimal sculptures that serve as furniture for everyday life.”

PROFILE

Søren Rose Studio

The dream of starting my studio was to actually do something that would outlive myself by making beautiful pieces that people could pass on for generations.

Søren Rose

I wanted to do something that would manifest itself into something you could look at, use, sit on, sleep in—I was tired of doing bits and bytes.

What's the story behind the Tribeca collection for MENU?

Tribeca was the first collection that I did after arriving in New York. I really needed to do something that was a hands-on, creative process. I went out to all these vintage stores and looked at industrial design—it was a little bit dirtier than what I was used to seeing in Copenhagen. I found all of these wonderful old components and started reusing and reiterating them, trying to make new ones. We rented an underground workshop on Franklin Street in Tribeca, and started building all the lamps. MENU came along and said, “We love what you’re doing.”

What do you look for in a collaboration?

I would say that all of the people we work with are like-minded. In my background as a serial entrepreneur, I was lacking a physical connection. I wanted to do something that would manifest itself into something you could look at, use, sit on, sleep in—I was tired of doing bits and bytes. The dream of starting my own studio was to actually do something that would outlive myself by making beautiful pieces that people could pass on for generations. The people that I admire are the people who share the same philosophy.

Søren's series of light sculptures for MENU was inspired by early-mid 20th-century American industrial design.

Norm Architects

We try to understand basic human biology and psychology—what it is that makes you feel welcome, regardless of your preferences, when you walk into a space.

Jonas Bjerre-Poulsen

Norm Architects' work spans several creative fields, including residential and commercial interiors and furniture design.

Jonas-Bjerre Poulsen and Kasper Rønn founded Norm Architects in 2008. At a time when the international design scene was enjoying a period of extravagance and excess, Norm Architects took a softer, more stripped-back approach, looking towards Japanese, Shaker and Bauhaus aesthetics for inspiration.

The firm's office in central Copenhagen takes on projects that span architecture, interiors, design and creative direction, all of which are approached with the same idea in mind: to create timeless, natural-feeling work with haptic qualities.

"We try to understand basic human biology and psychology—what it is that makes you feel welcome, regardless of your preferences, when you walk into a space," says Jonas. "We think it's very much to do with space itself—the walls surrounding you, the daylight and materials. It should feel cozy and comfortable even if it's completely empty."

It's a thought that Jonas also applies to our product design and creative direction as Design Director at MENU. "You can understand how something tastes, feels and smells with your eyes," he explains.

Norm Architects works with

Each product is created with a particular

Jonas Bjerre-Poulsen

You can understand how something tastes, feels and smells with your eyes.

Jonas Bjerre-Poulsen

In allowing his designs to be guided by the senses rather than trends, Jonas also tries to avoid the use of artificial materials that have been painted or lacquered, opting instead for different ceramics, metals and woods that give texture and tactility to MENU's products and furniture series. Each product is created with a particular function in mind.

At Norm Architects, Jonas and Kasper, who both trained under Danish industrial designer Ole Palsby, pay heed to Scandinavian design traditions and the principles of Modernism. Jonas approaches design with a certain restrained minimalism that undergoes numerous stages of refinement.

Jonas likens his approach to design as similar to curating an art exhibition: "If you put a lot of objects on a table and ask, 'How many things can I take away before it becomes uninteresting?' At some point, you have to put things back on the table until you find a balance and there's nothing more that you can add or take away to make a piece better. It's the same thing with design."

Drawings by Grethe Meyer of the GM series, 1984. The GM 30 and 15 Pendants were produced for the first time by MENU in 2013.

It is used every day, therefore it deserves to be beautiful as well as practical. That was the philosophy of pioneering designer and architect Grethe Meyer (1918–2008), a trailblazing woman at the helm of a male-dominated industry.

Grethe designed for the way people lived, spending hours watching and analyzing before putting pen to paper. In a speech accepting an award late in her career, she reflected on her values: “What I think is important is that design must be uncomplicated, and the product easy and comfortable to use, and as simple and anonymous as possible.” In this way, she believed that beauty would present itself. “A beauty that gives people who are using the product a natural pleasure, which grows stronger the more the product is used,” she said.

Grethe’s attitude was humble. (“Mostly, I meet new tasks by trying to build on earlier inspirations and ideals.”) But she was determined—she had to be to gain a foothold in what was then a man’s world. Grethe opened her studio in 1960, at a time when female architects were considered to be unequal to men. She worked open and creatively, never claiming to have all the answers. Her design approach, however, was systematic and reworked details, shapes and colors over and over again. “I find it very important that each of us put our full endeavor into the work we do, and for us creative individuals to persevere until we reach the core, the essential, the soul of the matter,” she explained. “This requires discipline, precision, engagement and complete attention. But also love for the work.”

Ildpot series by Grethe Meyer.

In the 1950s, collaborating with fellow Dane Børge Mogensen, Grethe designed Boligens Byggeskabe, a groundbreaking and best selling modular storage system that was beautiful in its simplicity. Grethe was drawn to products for the kitchen and dining table, most famously creating timeless ceramics for Royal Copenhagen, including the iconic Blåkant dinnerware set in 1963 and, later, the Ildpot range. Designed with busy working women in mind, the Ildpot collection could go from freezer to oven to table, withstanding massive swings in temperatures. She also designed the iconic Copenhagen cutlery set for Georg Jensen.

Grethe enjoyed a long career throughout the 20th century, before her death in 2008 at the age of 90. In a speech in 1997, she marveled at the wonders of nature. “I get dizzy when I think about it, especially considering that I know how much time it takes just to make a simple, small object such as a spoon, which is composed of only one material and which only has to fulfill a few functions, and certainly never can or shall grow as a plant or an animal.”

Grethe inspired many female architects and designers, pushing open the door to gender equality in the industry. At MENU, we have used her original sketches from 1984 to create the GM Pendant Lamp—available in two sizes. Hang one lamp over the dining table, two smaller ones as a pair, or install together in installations.

Grethe Meyer’s speech on the occasion of receiving the Danish Design Award. December 8, 1997.

I think it would be appropriate to explain a little about my method of working. Mostly, I meet new tasks by trying to build on earlier inspirations and ideals, improving them and, where needed, bringing their qualities up to date while preserving what I think is important—namely that the design must be uncomplicated, the product easy and comfortable to use and as simple and anonymous as possible in the expression of its properties. In this way, I think that beauty will present itself—a beauty that gives the people who are using the product a natural pleasure, a pleasure which preferably grows stronger the more the product is used. I would like to quote a line from a hymn:

*“If all the kings went forth one day with all their might and fettle,
They could not set the smallest leaf to grow upon a nettle”*

The humility Brorson expresses here is something we designers can carry with us. I must say that the older I get, the more I wonder and feel how fabulous the whole creation of the universe is.

I have a deep, deep admiration, reverence and respect for the powers, forces, call it what you will, that could create our wonderful world. I get dizzy when I think of it, especially considering that I know how many decisions and how much time it takes just to make a simple, small object, such as a spoon, which is composed of only one material and which only has to fulfill a few functions, and certainly never can or shall grow as a plant or an animal.

When we consider the universe which is continually expanding and evolving, and we try to understand—of course in vain—how infinitely great it is, we know that each of us can’t even be perceived as a tiny little dot.

All the same, I find it very important that each of us put our full endeavor into the work we do, and for us creative individuals to persevere until we reach the core, the essential, the soul of the matter.

Fulfillment of this demand requires both discipline, precision, engagement and complete attention, but also love for the work.

We are not just born with these abilities. They can only be acquired during a lifetime. It can happen in many ways, as for example in fellowship and cooperation with people who are important for our development. Often it begins with our parents, then teachers and other inspiring and charismatic people. These are people to whom you owe something. There is one person in my life that I want to mention: Børge Mogensen, with whom I cooperated on Boligens Byggeskabe. We probably had many common strains in our minds, plus his stubborn axiom: “Go back to the beginning and start all over again if, at the back of your mind, you know that not all is right in what you are doing.” Working this way was natural to both of us. He was the most creative and artistic designer I have known in our profession. It was a privilege to meet and work with him.

I’m not a painter or a sculptor, although I would have liked to have been both. And as I’m not, I do not translate my intentions into physical specimens or unique pieces. I therefore share this prize with all the artisans, silversmiths, chemists, technicians and other specialists who have understood my thoughts and drawings and turned them into the finished products. They are, or have all been, linked to Royal Copenhagen where it all started or maybe, should I say, some of it got started.

Today, I want to express a strong wish that in future much more consideration be given to the environment in all areas than has previously been the case. And, of course, also in the field of design in order to safeguard our beautiful but fragile earth—something that my generation, unfortunately, has not been very dedicated to.

And now, as we are assembled in this house [The House of Industry], I will take the liberty of addressing my opinion to the Industries. I recommend that they keep as many jobs in this country as possible, while at the same time making sure to keep good craftsmanship alive, which is essential for the quality of products to be maintained. Thus: Get many more jobs for apprentices, keep and maintain the machinery at the factories and start new, smaller companies. They were the ones that have established the quality of Danish craft and industry in the past.

If this is not heeded, we shall be left one day with an impoverished country, without living companies and a population without opportunities for decent employment opportunities.

Then we can start all over again to rebuild a country that hasn’t developed, but instead has deteriorated and turned into a service industry. We have seen this happen in many places in the world.

Finally, I will thank the Danish Design Center. You have all been so kind and helpful in connection with this event. Lastly, I will turn to the board of directors and say thank you for giving me the prize. Thank you for making me happy.

MAKING DESIGN MATTER

Nepal Projects

Nepal Projects is a humanitarian initiative established by MENU and put into action by Danida, a Danish NGO. Through supporting local craftsmanship and nurturing traditional skills in Nepal, we hope to generate more jobs and opportunities and create a positive impact on the lives of local communities. Over half of Nepal's population lives below the poverty line, earning as little as USD 1.25 a day.

Through supporting local craftsmanship and nurturing traditional skills, we hope to generate more jobs and opportunities, and create a positive impact on the lives of Nepalese communities.

Every year, an estimated 12,000 to 15,000 women and girls are trafficked out of Nepal. The majority are taken to India, South Korea and South Africa, where they endure unimaginable living and working conditions and become vulnerable to sexual abuse and exposed to life-threatening diseases.

At MENU, we believe in making design matter for the greater good. Nepal Projects unifies our Scandinavian design heritage with the rich history of Nepalese arts and crafts. To bring this project to life, we collaborated with three Nepali producers, all of whom were carefully selected based on a mutual passion and desire to see change in their society, while diligently operating with fair trade principles.

The design is available as a one-seat, two-seat and a three-seat sofa.

Iskos-Berlin is a partnership between Boris Berlin and Aleksej Iskos. The firm operates within the fields of industrial, furniture and graphic design. The studio was only established in 2010, despite Boris and Aleksej having worked together for a number of years prior to setting up shop. Septembre Sofa and Arm Chair
by Theresa Arns

The Septembre series solves an age-old conundrum in sofa design. While upholstered sofas are comfortable, they can often look boxy and inelegant; structured sofas are aesthetically pleasing, yet are seldom made for relaxation. The Septembre Sofa harmonizes the best of both.

The refined bent wooden arms and backrest give structure to the sofa, while inviting seating cushions provide comfort. A sofa of beautiful proportions, Septembre's stately yet intimate aesthetic gives it a contemporary feel. The sofa looks as good from behind as the front thanks to its high backrest, and is ideal for standing freely in a room or creating a separate, enclosed area.

The Tailor Sofa has a light and airy appearance thanks to structured upholstery and a wooden frame that also make it comfortable and practical.

Portuguese designer Rui Alves was inspired to create the Tailor Sofa by his grandfather's favorite tailor shop. Memories of tailors bent over the work tables and old wooden hangers holding gray suits have stayed with Rui. Just like that tailor shop, he has designed the Tailor Sofa to be authentic, with everything on display: "I wanted to show all of it, the structure, the beautiful oak wood. Nothing should be hidden, as is normally done in sofa design. The sofa is meant to be seen from all sides."

The first chair ever to be designed for MENU, the Afteroom Chair has been stripped of any unnecessary components to reveal the essential functions of a chair in its simplest form.

The Afteroom Chair is available with new upholstered finishes using the finest Aniline leather and Kvadrat textiles.

The Afteroom Chair pays homage to Bauhaus and functionalism with a design that combines minimalistic clean lines with quality materials to create an aesthetically stunning piece of design, without in any way compromising comfort.

Following the success of the original chair, the series now features two additional sizes—Bar and Counter Chairs—with new upholstered finishes using the finest Aniline leather and Kvadrat textiles, providing further luxury and comfort. New editions of the Afteroom Bar, Counter and Dining Chairs come with a fourth leg.

In addition to the best selling Afteroom range of dining chairs comes three tables. These new members of the family have been designed with cafés, bars and restaurants in mind—lightweight, easy to move around and hard-wearing. Inspired by the utility-comes-first principle of the Bauhaus movement, we love these tables for their clean lines and humble beauty.

Lighting

The objects we surround ourselves with at home reveal ourselves to the world. Let your lighting speak volumes.

A classic lamp design with a modern twist.

JWDA Pendant, Stainless Steel
by Jonas Wagell

The beauty of JWDA Lamp lies in the attraction of opposites—it is constructed from cool materials, brass and steel, yet casts a warm glow throughout the room. Its designer, Jonas Wagell, says he was inspired by traditional oil lamps. His update feels at home in both contemporary and traditional interiors, on a bedside table, or adding ambience to a neglected corner.

Tribeca Series

In 2014, we launched the Tribeca collection in collaboration with Søren Rose Studio. The series is a mix of lamps, pendants and chandeliers inspired by the glamor of New York City in the late 1930s.

The various shapes and designs in the Tribeca series were created from an inspiring process in which Søren Rose Studio traveled the US searching for beautiful old lamps and reusable parts. All parts were separated and then reassembled, with Søren mixing and matching styles until new and much bolder designs emerged. This, in combination with elegant details and a glamorous feel, makes a Tribeca lamp a retro-feeling piece of art.

Søren Rose is a talented Danish entrepreneur with a background in creative direction and in the tech and photography industries. His dream of running his own studio came true in 2008, and today he lives in New York City where he runs Søren Rose Studio.

A smart example of the MENU approach in action.

Bollard Lamp
by Shane Schneck

Bollard is an innovative lamp from American designer Shane Schneck. Working from his studio Office for Design in Stockholm, the industrial designer and his team “work for people and companies who admire simplicity and innovation”—like MENU. Shane strives to bridge the world of design and technology in a desire to challenge industry standards and discover new solutions to contemporary living.

Bollard is a smart example of the MENU approach in action. The first perception of Bollard may appear like any other ordinary pendant but a cleverly designed clip and foot allows the lamp to perform in many situations. Suspended from the ceiling, the lamp functions as a traditional light. Clip the cord into a side fastener and it can work as a spotlight. Bollard may also be used to beam light upwards when placed on its foot, or else can be casually placed on a shelf.

It’s a versatile lamp that can be used on its own or grouped together in a home, office or café environment with an 350 cm cord that allows you to point the light wherever you need it.

The Standard Pendant
by Sylvain Willenz

Tied Pendant
by WRK-SHP

Cast Pendant takes inspiration from the traditional plumb weight—a tool used by masons and carpenters since Ancient Egypt.

Made of cast iron with brass knobs. Designed in Montreal by Tom Chung and Jordan Murphy.

The lamp is available in three variations, and a splitter allows for a variety of configurations. Each light measures 10-13cm.

Cast Pendant embodies MENU's philosophy of soft minimalism. Hang one lamp on its own or cluster several into an installation.
